2. Ambassador Fairbanks reported on the 23-24 February Dourdan meeting where representatives of the Summit Seven countries, the EC Commission, Norway, the Netherlands, Australia and Denmark met to discuss the initial draft of the energy requirements study prepared by the IEA Secretariat. Ambassador Fairbanks pointed out that the draft was well-received by all delegations. At Dourdan there was a general consensus that the draft was a good beginning toward the development of policy conclusions for consideration at the OECD Ministerial scheduled for 8-9 May. Ambassador Fairbanks also reported that some delegations, including the French, expressed the view that they were not adverse to putting energy on the Summit agenda. He added that the Norwegian representative emphasized his government's desire to move forward with plans to develop Troll. According to Fairbanks, the Norwegian Prime Minister indicated in his recent meeting with President Reagan that commercial activity affecting development of the Troll field should begin this calendar year. The Dutch delegate at Dourdan indicated that his government is continuing to discuss with the Norwegians on a bilateral basis the prospects for importing Norwegian gas to replenish dwindling Dutch production. Ambassador Fairbanks noted, however, that the Dutch were rather cryptic about the size of Groningen reserves. [ ]

2. John Ferriter (State/EB) noted the timetable set for discussion of the energy requirements study:

- 10 March - circulation of a revised draft of the study
- 21-22 March - discussion in the IEA's Standing Group on Long Term Cooperation
- 23 March - discussion in the OECD's Committee on Energy, Policy, of which France is a member
- 24 March - discussion of final draft in IEA Governing Board

3. Bill Martin (NSC) then reported on the work underway relating to the export of Alaskan oil, pointing out that a first draft of the analysis should be available for distribution to all relevant agencies this week. He recommended and all agreed that before moving too far along on the study, a meeting with the Japanese was advisable to ascertain their views. Jack Silvey (DOE) commented at some length on the domestic economic impact of lifting the ban on Alaskan oil. [REDACTED]

4. The Japanese energy working group is awaiting preparation of several papers one of which is the Alaskan oil export analysis. [REDACTED]
